

Flasher reported near Stevens Creek Trail

A man exposed himself to a woman sitting in her car near an entrance to the Stevens Creek Trail on Monday, April 12, according to Mountain View police.

The woman, a 33-year-old Mountain View resident, called police around 9:40 a.m. to say that she had been sitting in her car working on her computer at Yuba Drive and Church Street when a man walked by, said police spokeswoman Liz Wylie. When he was about 30 feet away from her, he exposed himself and then walked away, Wylie said. Police were not able to locate the suspect.

The flasher is described as a light-skinned man in his 30s, of medium height and stocky build, wearing a gray jacket and dark pants. Wylie said police have not recently received any other reports of indecent exposure.
